

【Announcement】

Eiichi Nakamura, a Molecular Technology Chair Professor, has been given the title of University Professor, the University of Tokyo announced on September 9th.

The university has established this title to recognize important individuals within the institution who are making significant contributions to his or her academic field internationally, and who are continuing to lead research activities that will contribute to further developments in the field in the future .